

 ULTRACKER

REKA

by  Nexans

TAKEOVER - CHANGE OF OWNERSHIP

According to the drum return terms, the drum returner must be the owner of the drums.

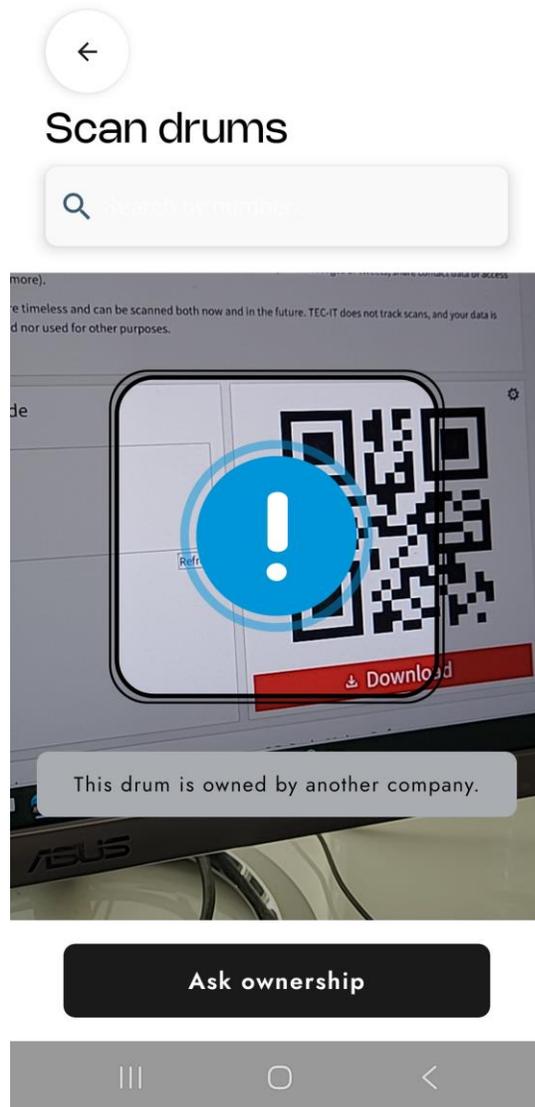

All drums delivered by Reka are transferred to the customer's ownership, after which Reka can no longer view or manage the drum's information. When, for example, a drum purchased from a wholesaler is being returned, from Ultracker's perspective, the wholesaler is the owner.

Ultracker includes a takeover function, where the user handling or returning the drum requests ownership for themselves. The transferring company must approve the request, after which the drum becomes visible to the new owner.

A takeover can be requested at any time, and we hope that customers will always take ownership of the drums when they start handling them. This makes the return notification process smoother.

The takeover function is only possible with the mobile application. All requests and approvals are saved in both the mobile and web applications. The information can be found in the menu under its own heading: Takeovers.

Approval of a takeover can be made automatic, so that all requests are approved automatically, or automatic approval can be set up with so-called trusted partners.

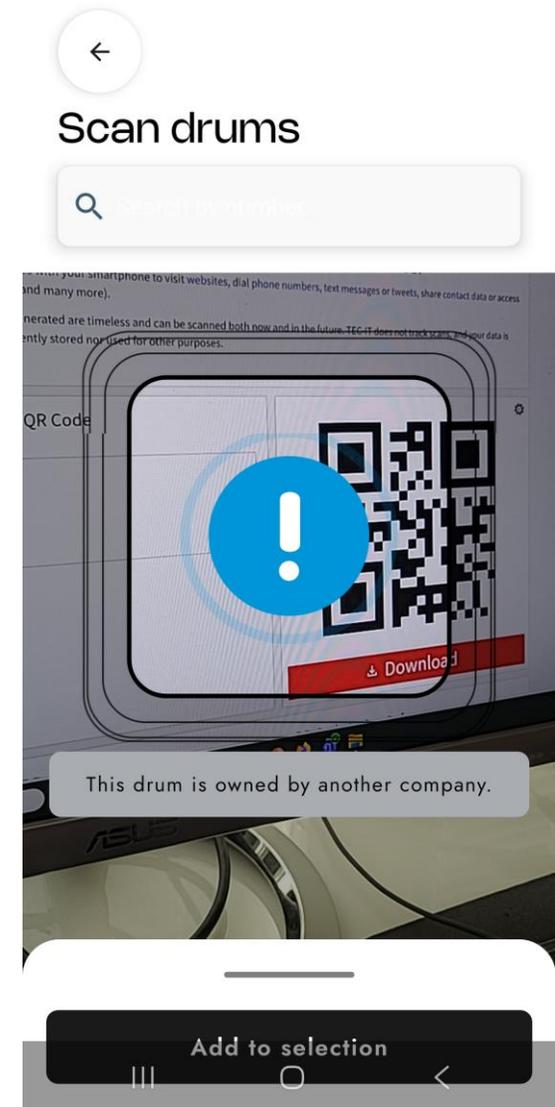

The function starts by selecting the QR code icon from the map view, which opens the Scan drums view. The drum number can also be entered in the search field.

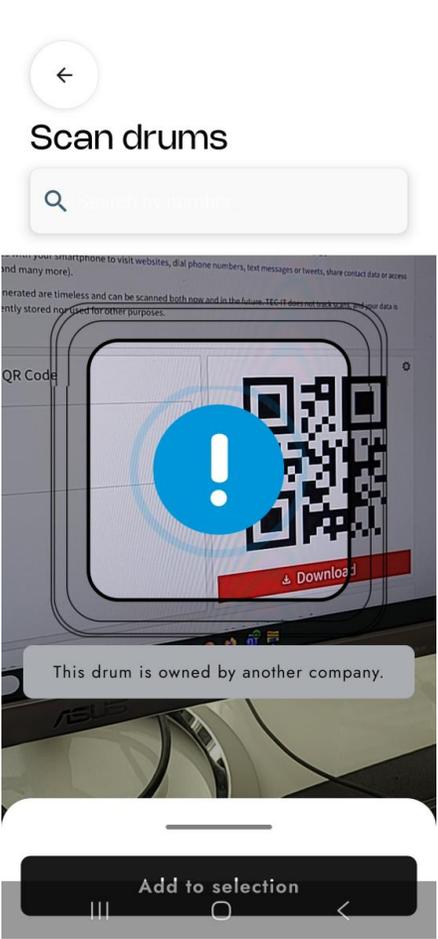

The drum's information will be displayed if the ownership is correct; otherwise, the system will notify you that the drum is not in your ownership.

By clicking Request ownership, the drum is added to the request. You can scan several drums into the same request and send the request at once. The system sends the requests to the owners of the drums.

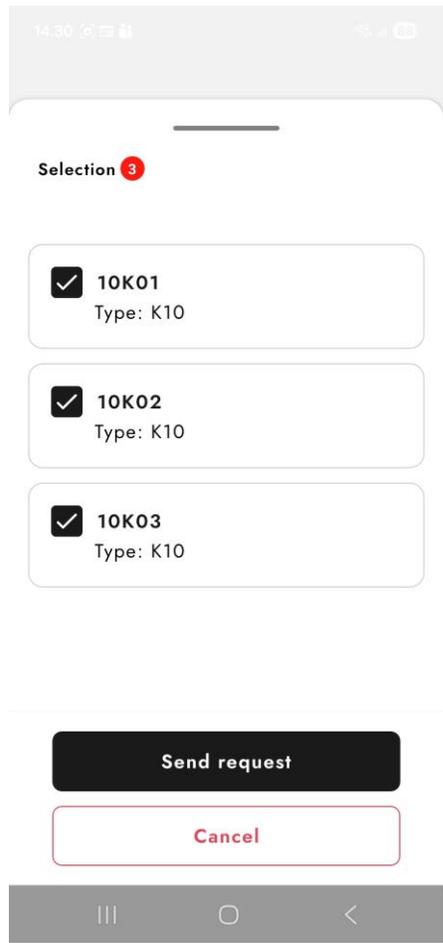

At the bottom, you can see how many drums are selected, and with the Continue button, you can proceed to the summary, after which you select Send request.

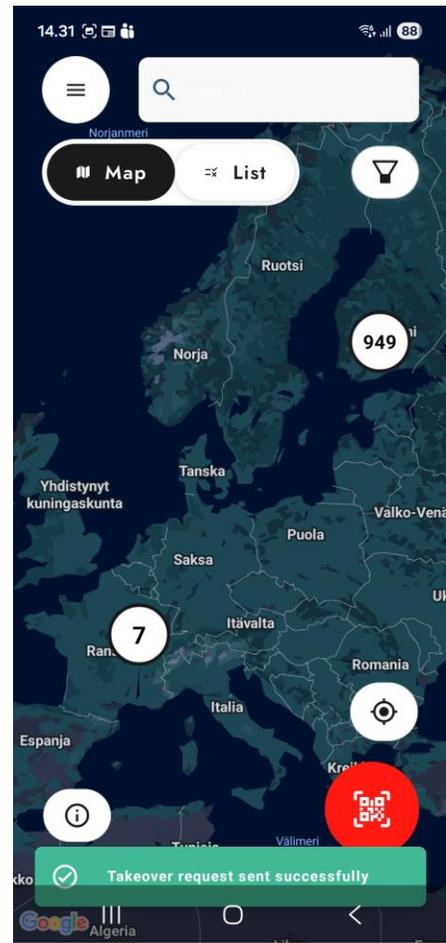

Scanning and adding a new drum to the request.

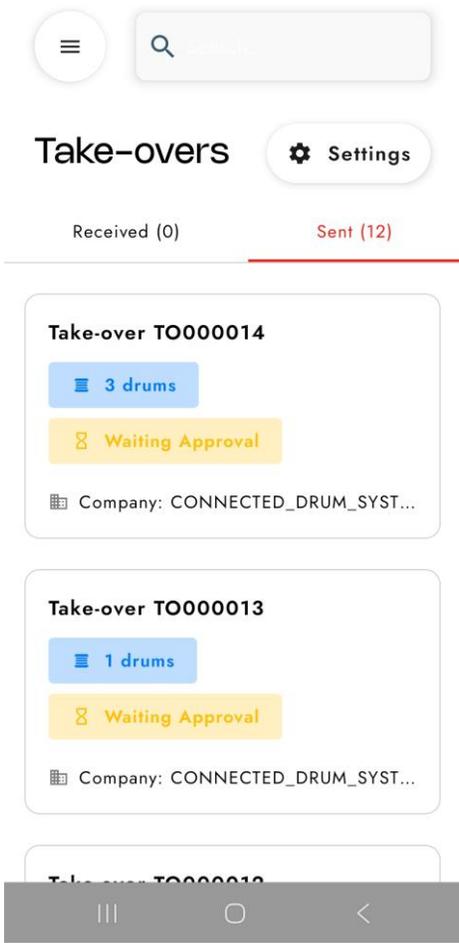

You can scroll through all the drums in the request using the horizontal line. When ready, send the request.

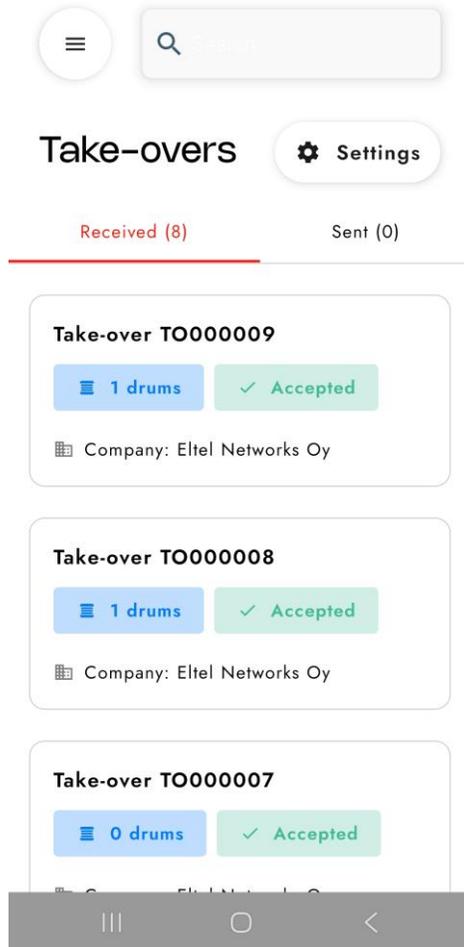

A notification of the sent request will appear at the bottom, and the display will open to the drum list.

From the menu, you can find Takeovers, where you can view sent and received requests.

When you have received a takeover request, you have the option in the settings to make automatic approvals.

After the first request, the system asks if you want to add the company to the list of trusted companies.

Automatic approval can be set for all companies, or you can choose per company whether approval is automatic or if requests are always approved separately.

